Pregnancy and kid birth isn't a pathology but a social function. However, even as many figures still reveal, there is not much showing on ground for the committments. Privatisation carries away a few of the achievements as medical care including maternity is seen as a comodity marketed and bought on the market to the drawback of the poor and the ones in remote control areas. The provision of providers that guarantee basic safety through this noble period in a lifestyle of a woman is therefore component of a parcel of privileges that these mothers are entitled to! especially in the rural regions of Sub Saharan Africa, many lives are still lost while fulfilling the social function of procreation. Despite having the purported decentralisation of services to reach the very residents,many studies, including the work contained in this book reveal that alot needs to be carried out to fulfill the various promises. It has been recognised and prioritised at many amounts from the International committees to national resolutions.
