The exhibition The Architect is Present shows the work of five influential international studios who have turned austerity into their ethic and aesthetic motto. From Norway and Germany to Burkina Faso, and from Paraguay to Australia passing through India or Thailand, these studios have built housing, rural schools or social centers with a fantastic overall economy of means, admirable adaptation to collective requirements and exemplary material execution. With offices located in five continents, these young architects work in underprivileged contexts, proving that scarcity of means can activate specialized inventiveness and community participation, and become the basis for a responsible architecture where in fact the vocation of service will not exclude beauty and emotion.
