The security challenges to a nation possess entered an era of unremitting unpredictability and complexity and so are being further exacerbated by violent transnational extremism, globalisation, proliferation of technology and by rogue powers. From this backdrop of a dynamic, ever-evolving, and changing global geopolitical landscape, we must eschew traditional beliefs and bring in the idea of convergence to centre stage. Convergence of effects in time and space, convergence of the kinetic and non-kinetic, physical and psychological capabilities and usage of all tenets of warfare— In this, today's, potential and perceived vulnerabilities over the spectral range of conflict will most likely end up being targeted using combinational or hybrid threats.” Today, the strategy articulation process has transferred beyond a parochial obsession with conventional battle. The doctrinal bulwark for protection agencies takes into account inextricably intertwined and intricately overlapped war domains, rather than compartmentalising them. This articulation is definitely in sync with sights of several military analysts, who believe that multivariate and multimodal nature of future conflicts will become further accentuated because of myriad threats from unpredicted quarters. which will be the cornerstones for formulation of army doctrine of a typical military—threatscape’hybrid warfare. is being referred to as “ are central to responses against threats from myriad threat vectors and actors.offensive and defensive operations, espionage, ethics and legalities, propaganda and intelligence— The amalgam of conventional and irregular capabilities at operational and tactical levels will make things even more obscure, indistinguishable and complicated, contributing to the thickening of the “fog of battle” This quantity, a resource base for both professional and general visitors, can be tenth in the series under this name. Today, the construct of conflict is conceptualised from the perspective of an amorphous enemy, defused national boundaries and undefined battle space. Enumeration of threat vectors and actors, pre-emptive posturing and marking of battle lines— The complexity, lethality, scope and frequency connected with this new ‘ aren't easily quantifiable parameters anymore. The era of large-scale state-on-state warfare can be passe and has provided way to ambiguous, protracted, indecisive conflict in complex conditions. The Centre for Air Power Studies (CAPS) has been publishing the Asian Defence Review to analyse and understand these problems and provide insight into possible ways of mitigate these..
