AN OIL ODYSSEY 2000 may be the real-life story of a mad-cap motorcycle adventure down the then-only proposed Baku-Tbilisi-Ceyhan "Pipeline To Nowhere" undertaken in August 2000.. Who says geopolitics can not be fun? The chaotic trip of nearly 2,000 kilometers wended its method across the post-Soviet Caucasus, from Azerbaijan through Georgia and then eastern Turkey, looking into geopolitical realities all along the way. The result?. Lasting friendships, enduring enmities, at least one relationship. The team of twenty-odd of Alpha Men (and females!And the pipeline eventually got built!) drawn from twelve countries forded rivers, climbed mountains and slept in forests along their way, determined to provide the first barrel of symbolic Caspian crude to the Mediterranean Sea--and on the sidecar of nostalgic Soviet sidecar (IMZ-Ural) motorcycles!

Apparently Geopolitics could be fun. Within an era whenever we are questioning the future of energy and worldwide economics it is vital to understand where and where to find the future of oil. Apparently Geopolitics could be fun. Great read If you want an interesting account of how exactly to turn a dream into reality and see how the real world works It is advisable to read Oil Odyssey. I bought this for the Urals but couldn't help but learn a bit approximately the essential oil business and the spot along the way.
