Michael Schofield (Reading with Pictures) review: " Leeds. Frigging. A woman. Charming and funny, there exists a little related-something comparable to my youth's sacred WHERE THE WILD THINGS ARE that called-up my internal monster-fearer from below my inner dork that produced Sarah and Steve Troop's comic immediately endearing. It's no stretch of imagination to comprehend what received over Comic-Conners when it is marketed as "CryptoZooey. Deserved! A quest. Now, Zooey's parents had been cryptozoologists, which as we all know are the individuals who told us all that monsters don't can be found." Monsters rule. And the monsters that help her.D. Using one of their voyages, nevertheless - if I understand right - they simply don't keep coming back, so little Zooey must be raised by her grandmother. - we learn. However when grandma croaks, Zooey must live with a distant and mystical relative - a Mr. J. Liars!So, CryptoZooey #1 was popular at Comic-Con - and it had been Good. It's hard to state any other thing more about the storyline without spoiling it, but chalk-up just a little Lemony Snickett and a dash of MonsterQuest and you'll get the idea." Scarce.
