We have been being silly with the AsRock H110 professional BTC+ motherboard for crypto mining with support for up to 13x GPUs and that we will already share some feedback supported our expertise with it. to date we've tried running the motherboard with 13 Nvidia GPUs of constant model – Adding a ninth or additional video cards makes Windows unstable and notwithstanding the driving force gets properly put in as before long as we have a tendency to run a mineworker the system freezes, running multiple instances of miners on simply some cards every doesn't facilitate. AsRock recommends that you simply use a mixed combination of eight + five GPUs below Windows we tend to will ensure that we weren't able to build over 8x GTX 1070 GPUs work properly below Windows. specifically GeForce GTX 1070 below Windows and UNIX. With Linux-based mining distributions but we have a tendency to had no hassle running the motherboard simply fine with all 13x Nvidia GPUs out of the box. Running 13x GPUs on one motherboard brings up lots of potential issues with you connecting everything up and creating it work. once more this setup was only for testing things up and not for a production mining rig that may run 24/7, thus certify you've got a bigger frame for 13x GPUs once mistreatment the AsRock H110 professional BTC+ motherboard. It will need extra space than a daily rig designed for simply six to eight GPUs, despite the fact that we tend to truly managed for squeeze 12x GTX 1070 GPUs in such a rig for the sake of testing solely, the last card was alittle an excessive amount of but, thus it remained on the highest of the frame.}
