(From the Foreward)""s hierarchy of requirements, particularly food, shelter and wellness, for themselves and perchance their loved ones as well. The one side typically has bank accounts as the other side typically has not. The one side most likely has graduated from college, if not grad school, as the other side likely has not... The one part provides crossed the digital divide as the other side has not. The objective of this book is to put the innovations and concurrent financial marketplace bubble surrounding the blockchain, cryptocurrencies and related technologies in the context of our current world: one where on one side of the road are those who are fully engrossed in the experience of monitoring their crypto investments on the smartphones and each night drift into a pleasant dream of early retirement, financial independence and luxuriating in splendor and on the other side of the street are those who are incognizant of crypto but instead are fully engrossed in the experience of satisfying the low tiers of Maslow'
