Seduced by the thought of a carefree lifestyle riding an orange bike around North London, providing letters with a spring in his step and a cheerful wave to all or any, Ben Slotover signs up with Whistl. Along the way he encounters the sometimes bizarre workings of this attempted rival to the Royal Mail and a variety of co-workers also attracted to existence on an orange bicycle and zero hours contract. Thus begins an event in his existence that takes him to every corner of culture, from the unspeakably rich to the abysmally poor.
