I am Ralph Thomson. I share operational security suggestions that I take advantage of to keep myself anonymous, detailed accounts of my exploits, life at the agency, some of my triumphs, and many of my failures. I am a previous NSA analyst, a freelance programmer, and an open up source software contributor.I have problems with extreme paranoia and anxiety, but it is probably not unfounded. My curiosity led me to a variety of industries, specifically offshore banking and money laundering, which released me to a range of clients that I should have avoided. See, my expertise isn't only in development. A hacker loves to find alternate ways of thinking - we prefer to understand how systems function, which isn't limited to code and databases. A series of occasions and naive decision-making would transformation the trajectory of my life, where I unknowingly boxed myself right into a part.This series tells my story. I am 26 years old.
