Part of a thorough series by Schiffer Publishing on fashions from the Sears catalogs, this current time capsule travels back to the late 1930s. A lot more than 350 photos reveal what the everyday developments and styles for the present day man, woman, and child were. Children's clothes mimicked the adult styles." The cut of the clothing, especially for women, were intended to give a slim and trim appear. For men, suits were styled in the Clean-Cut, extremely popular Sports Back, and Classic designs. Skirts and dresses almost always have that so-essential flaring hemline. Pleats, embroidery, shirring, and fur were among a few of the big fashion "must-haves."

Wonderful fashion summary of the period. Yet another fine book from Schiffer's growing series of this kind. The images from the catalog are reproduced clearly and sharp. The shades also look well described. We will probably never see fashion such as this once again. The focus is definitely mainly on women's fashions, as there generally is definitely in this series, and there is a sampling of men's and childrens clothing, too. Five Stars Great books. The amount of detailing seems nearly "fussy" (bows, buttons, embroidery, pleats, gatherings, shirring and so on) but it could be pretty to look at and I can almost start to admire the level of effort it took to keep such a feminine image.
