The commercial pet food industry includes a secret to cover up — and Ann Martin wants to make sure you know it. In this revised and updated edition, Martin proceeds to explore the shocking procedures by which commercial pet foods are created. Her research reveals some startling facts: that your pet food sector conducts animal testing to be able to improve their product, and includes euthanized cats and dogs in the combine to heighten protein content. This groundbreaking book provides us a glimpse into just what we are performing when we buy pet meals. She offers alternative dishes for feeding pets, nutritional guidance, and an exploration of "Pet Peeves," in which she explores many scams aimed at pet owners.
