It all began when Sugarman's processed food factory came to town. The once green rolling hills have turned dark brown and the lakes and streams have grown to be polluted! The folks of Pleasantville have already been slowly transformed right into a zombie-like existence from eating Sugarman's items. Change begins with a choice. They see DARK MURKY MUCK lurking in the sky over Pleasantville, so they end to see what's causing it. Everyone must have an opportunity to grow up strong and healthy also to be able to pursue their dreams. They set about to greatly help their new close friends Jake and Karen restore health and vitality to the people of the city, clean the environment, and convert the greedy owner of a processed food organization, into an enlightened and generous man! Lifestyle choices, healthful eating, exercise, bicycle riding, caring for the environment and moral lessons are all covered up in this fun, illustrated, educational reserve! The consequences of eating processed foods and too much sugar are making people sick. Kids and parents will like this book! It will produce a dialogue, and have them excited to become proactively involved in their own food options, and actions, while fostering awareness about how to treat our planet. What they discover can occur anywhere. Traveling in the united states are Kato and his human being parents known as Team Wlody.
