This book provides an in-depth study of adolescents' cultural development in the context of the family's study in the last 25 years. Draws from the results of in-depth interviews with more than 700 families. Explores adolescent-mother or father relationships among ethnic majority and minority youth in the United States, as well as study with adolescents in Hong Kong and China. Discusses extensive research on disclosure and secrecy during adolescence, parenting, autonomy, and moral development. Considers both popular sources such as movies and public surveys, and also scholarly sources drawn from anthropology, history, sociology, public psychology, and developmental psychology. Explores how different strands of advancement, including autonomy, rights and justice, and society and social convention, become integrated and coordinated in adolescence. Grounded in social domain theory, the book draws on the author's
