The fifth edition of Adult Development and Aging has expanded the coverage of dementia and the functional disorders, psychotherapy, everyday memory and learning, the developmental areas of grief and bereavement as well as psychotherapy with dying persons. Adult Development and Aging handles most of adulthood, giving equivalent coverage to problems facing young, middle-aged, and older individuals in our society. In addition the reference section provides been updated to include the newest studies on a variety of topics. Implications for the everyday functioning of adults are stressed as may be the scientific basis for our knowledge of adults of most ages. Special account is given to problems with respect to personality and psychopathology, scientific interventions, cognitive processes such as for example learning, memory, and intelligence, social roles in adulthood, physical changes with age, and death and dying. Emphases are put on the relationships of a number of domains of functioning to one another, on the knowledge of adults within the context of the complete life span, and on the relativistic character of adulthood. The written text examines the advancement of adults of most ages from a topical rather than chronological perspective. The written text has a glossary, and each chapter includes a list of terms and review queries. You can find opportunities for college students to evaluate the standard of their learning, as well as short interviews with adults on a variety of topics relevant to their everyday lives such as for example marriage, parenting, grandparenting, hospice care, adult knowledge, and mental health.
