Regular Train Early Years contributor and SEN expert Adele Devine shares her top tips for making the school environment as welcoming and inclusive as possible for children with SEN and autism. Help kids with SEN and autism to have a good first impression of your school and it could make all of the difference with their entire school experience. This book covers important topics such as dealing with parents, assisting transitions between home and school, helping children with sensory issues to cope in a stimulating classroom, teaching waiting and endurance skills, using visual teaching strategies, understanding behaviour, promoting independence plus much more. Designed to be ideal for dipping into and referring back to as complications arise, this book is a fantastic resource for active educators. Case studies and practical examples demonstrate exactly how a truly inclusive classroom can be achieved, by demonstrating how a range of situations are experienced from the child's perspective.
