'Each stage of life has its somatic and psychic normality in addition to pathology.' The idea behind this monograph would be to alert interested psychoanalysts, learners and those operating from an interdisciplinary standpoint to the possibility of a better knowledge of the ageing process in addition to a group of potential analysis that seem to exist in the shadow of our professional communications. Also explored are such issues as death and the midlife crisis, loneliness and the ageing procedure, ageing and psychopathology, fear of loss of life, transference and countertransference issues, and the ultimate stage of the dying procedure. Two papers address the analysis of an elderly individual directly and bring the task and the difficulties it brings vividly to life. This book includes a selection of classic psychoanalytical papers related to ageing, dying and death which have appeared in the renowned International Journal of Psychoanalysis (IJP).
