Codependents and psychological manipulators are similarly enveloped in a seductive dreamlike state; When people with healthy psychological backgrounds meet, the irresistible “love pressure” creates a sustainable, reciprocal and stable relationship. Since the dawn of civilization, women and men have been magnetically and irresistibly drawn together into romantic relationships, not so much by what they see, feel and think, but more by invisible forces. Readers of the Individual Magnet Syndrome will better realize why they, despite their dreams for true love, end up hopelessly and painfully in love with partners who harm them. The soul mate of the codependent’s dreams can be the emotional manipulator of their nightmares. However, it will later unfold into a painful “seesaw” of love, pain, hope and disappointment. This book will guide and inspire both layman and the professional.
