Use special interests to teach and support skill use! Winner of the 2018 Teachers' Choice Award! The authors are hopeful that the next edition of the book will further inspire professionals and parents to include special interests in to the lives of learners on the spectrum. It was author Elisa Gagnon's insightful and innovative initial edition of Power Cards that helped move the usage of special interests forward, promoting research on unique interests and teaching educators to utilize them in classrooms and family members to utilize them at home and in the community. Many experts, parents, and individuals with ASD themselves possess long understood the function of special interests in teaching and motivating people with autism spectrum disorder (ASD), yet these intense areas of knowledge have not been widely integrated into the training activities of kids on the spectrum.
