This is a wonderful book This is actually the story of George Dawson: a figure seemingly destined to be poor, angry and uneducated but who network marketing leads a life rich in experiences, personal connections and wisdom. Those who are somewhat acquainted with the publication will think its simply about an illiterate 98 year aged who decides to go back to school..100 years of history told through the normal man's pov, who happens to be black, sees first hand how people judge (and kill) based on pores and skin alone, relays life in a small Texas town growing up, travels the united states as a young guy, returns to Texas to raise a family group, demonstrates perseverance, gratitude, wisdom of elders, need for reading and lifelong learning."Some of George's wisdom is definitely expressed in simple however powerful witticisms:-For me its like fishing. His life experiences by itself were remarkable.-).-Those people have been marching for you and now you cant let them down.-That boy viewed me but didn't, couldn't believe a word I said, and I shut up because he didn't even see me. Don't you ever neglect. He wasn't read to learn. Inspirational, educational, interesting --bought extras & ; Terms he lived by. Champion of the Christopher Award -- books that "affirm the best values of the individual spirit."Discovered this in Barnes & Noble while looking for a book that would fulfill a dual credit history teacher's requirements for content (and mine for duration, dialog, action, readability). This went WAY beyond my criteria because of the inspirational story and moral illustrations.e. Do you consider there are times when anger is a better response than acceptance? Once you become familiar with the main character, you understand that anecdote is only a clear extrapolation for a man who spent his very existence working hard, incrementally bettering himself.. Because the writer recounts, "I had come to record a existence of hardship and was not prepared to hear of gratitude..My only complaint. It is rather enjoyable to read.. Five Stars good book. "As they rode home in their wagon after seeing a lynching, George Dawson's dad told his angry and outraged 10 year previous son, "You haven't any to judge another human being. He saw an old black man, a gardener... I stopped speaking and he didn't learn nothing about his grandma's loom." Ninety years later, George Dawson recounted, "I didn't know it then, but his words set the direction my entire life would take actually till this day.! A few."Imo, there should have been a issue much like..."What's the difference between judging the activities of a person as harmful and unwise, and judging the individual as a whole?" (Hate the sin, not really the sinner. Judge not, least ye end up being judged. We are walk in different shoes on the earth school journey... Five Stars This is such a good book. sequel Life is So Great by George Dawson and Richard Glaubman "1 man's extraordinary journey though the twentieth hundred years and how he learned to read at age 98.-) How about this one, "Do you consider there are individuals who learn how to accept every human beings where they are, yet stand firm against their unwise options.. Worth the time to read.without the need of fear based anger?" Or for more mature readers "Anger is the protecting emotion we feel when we believe our needs are not being met. Can you really react out of faith and love instead of fear in any situation?" (I. LOVED it for therefore many reasons., How will one become a saint? A must read!-A man is supposed to work and take pride in what he does no real matter what the work is normally.. Bought extra copies for college, the original tale and the sequel for self.) A Remarkable Man I just enjoyed every word.but removing fear and reacting out of faith is my eventual state to be. George Dawson was a truly remarkable guy. He was full of common sense, road smarts, and wisdom passed on to him from his father." Worth buying for school, friends, or relatives.
