When I surface finish this book, I begin it over. I'm reading at least one prayer a day. I grew up, and long felt, that prayers should be spontaneous. I would suggest it to anyone. Sure, spontaneous prayer, and prayer for particular situations and people, is important, but praying along with a prayer that someone else has written can be simply as meaningful, and, if the prayers are as well done as Aguilera's, even more meaningful. Each prayer starts with a selection from the Bible, then there's a prayer, which is related to the verse(s) quoted. As I read these prayers, my Spirit says, YES that's exactly what I need to say to God. I wish to walk according to your laws, and I want to look for you with all of my heart. I find myself thinking while reading a prayer "that can be what I have been trying to state to God," but couldn't find what. Here is a quotation from another prayer: "I pray as We walk with you, by your grace let me be a person whose single aim is a burning up desire for you and you also alone. My Prayer Life is energized I recently bought this reserve of prayers from Amazon and also have it on my Kindle and IPAD." There are more prayers of this type, and the title is appropriate. Among the best 99 cents I ever spent. One trivial cause, is that there have been no serious English usage errors in the book, even though author does seem to be more hesitant than she should be in using commas. For instance, here's part of prayer 3: "I want you Father as a starving man needs food, as a man dying of thirst needs water. Exceptional book! DESIRING GOD: 31 Prayers Seeking the Center of GOD I choose a 5-star rating as the 31 prayers were so perfect & I was having problems wording prayers to God as they constantly sounded jaded if you ask me when I made them up. I talk to this in Jesus name, Amen. I have no plans to stop reading it. This book has energized my prayer existence considerably. The author offers crawled into my psyche and worded what is there beautifully. The 1st prayer quotes Psalm 119:1-8, and then begins like this: "Dad, the desire of my heart is to love you, and to know you more. And I remove from there on my own." "Father" may have been set off by commas. Each and every prayer in this publication shows true humility at its best. Ms. Aguilera is indeed honest, open up and unassuming in her prayers; they're great examples of how exactly we can have a more genuine relationship with God.
